GUITEAU'S PAPERS.

Another Application Presented to the Court To-day.

When Justice Cox got seated on the bench in the Criminal Court this morning, he found standing before him, at the attorney's table, Mr. George Scoville, of the counsel for Charles J. Guiteau, indicted for the murder of President Garfield.

He said that he did not see the District Attorney in his seat, but there was a matter that he wished to speak of and felt could not longer be delayed. He wished to call the attention of the Court to the question of postponement that had recently been brought to the notice of the Court by his associate in the case. He had not so much to say on that point as the one in connection with the possession of certain papers, clippings, &c., that had been taken from Guiteau at the time of his arrest.

His Honor said that Mr. Robinson, yesterday, had an interview with the District Attorney, and found, after examining the papers, that they were not such as he wanted, or what he had supposed them to be.

Mr. Scoville answered that there were wanted, or what he had supposed them to be.

Mr. Scoville answered that there were some papers he believed to be of service to them. They desired to possess them, that they might consult and have the benefit of the prisoner's explanation in connection with them. The question of the custody of the papers was properly correct. They could receipt for them, or have a stenographer make copies of them. There were three classes of papers that they wanted:

The clippings from newspapers made by the prisoner five or six weeks before the shooting occurred. What they wanted them for was to show the condition of the man's mind before the shooting was done; to show what influence operated upon him prior to the committing of the act, at least six weeks before it. Then, instead of letters addressed to Guiteau in person, they wanted the printed circulars addressed to him in common with all the people of the United States that they might see their contents, and try and discover what influence those papers might have had upon him.

Second. They wanted a printed book be-him.

Second. They wanted a printed book belonging to the defendant, and taken from thim at the time of his arrest. He had been informed that Guiteau had made annotations weeks before the shooting, and it was desired to see what was the state of his mind when this memeranda was written and what he was thinking about. They twished to examine the ease in all its bearings, and see if these matters would be proper for them to produce in evidence.

There was another matter he would not speak of if it could be helped, and he regretted that the District Attorney was not in his seat, as he did not desire to make a statement in his absence, but it could not gretted that the District Attorney was not in his seat, as he did not desire to make a statement in his absence, but it could not be avoided. A few days since a letter was written at the jail and addressed to the speaker. The warden brought it to his residence, and he (Mr. Scoville) not being there, placed it in the hands of the District Attorney, and up to that time he had been unable to get it. He insisted that under no color of right was the District Attorney entitled to keep the letter from him.

His Honor said that he should think that he was entitled to the letter, and, in regard to the other letters, he would consult and see what arrangement could be made.

In regard to an extension of time he could not make a further postponement of the trial, except on the consent of both counsel. Much had already been done to proceed at the time designated, and he did not fiel that he would be justified in granting a postponement.

not feel that he would be justified in granting a postponement.

When the court reconvened after the recess, District Attorney Corkhill appeared in his place, and, gaining the attention of the Judge, said that he understood that Mr. Scoville had that morning in court and in his absence renewed his application for the possession of certain papers found on the assassin at the time he committed this crime and when he was arrested. He would not concede the right of the papers to any one but himself. In regard to a private letter addressed to Mr. Scoville and said to be in his passession coming through the be in his passession coming through the warden of the jail, he would say that such was not the fact. He had never received the letter, and knew nothing about it.

He would further say that Mr. Robinson was informed in regard to the character of the papers that he held, and that gentleman said that they were not what he wanted or the papers that he held, and that gentlema said that they were not what he wanted, o supposed they were.

Mr. Scoville worked his way through the crowd and stated to the Court that he would present to his honor in the morning the at fidavit of Warden Crocker, which would prove what he had said to be correct.

To the Editor of The Evening Critic:

Your correspondent, "Fiat Lux," labors under a mistake in supposing that the employees of the Government Printing-office, by working extra hours will make up a part of the loss sustained by being forced to lose six days on account of the death and funeral of the late President by order of the Public Printer. On the contrary, it would take a year's extra work to make up the time lost by furleugh during the past year. To those unacquainted with the workings of that national publication establishment, this much-talked-of extra work looks like a big thing. The fact is, the reason of this extra thing. The fact is, the reason of this extra work is nothing but the forerunner of another furlough before the sunmer sets in. Night-work will exhaust the appropriations, and hundreds of men and women will be furloughed, as has been the custom during the past four years. As "Fint Lux" has referred to Comp-

As "Fint Lux" has referred to Comptroller Lawrence, it may not be out of place to state that at the time the office was closed by order of Mr. Defrees, Judge Lawrence was not in the city. Hence he is not responsible for the closing of the office. The employees of the office have submitted their case to the decision of that gentleman, and he has promised to render a decision this month as to whether they are entitled to pay for the time the office was closed per order of Mr. Defrees. REFORT OF COMPTROLLER LAWRENCE.—
Judge William Lawrence, First Comptroller of the Treasury Department, has submitted his annual report to the Secretary. Warrants were received, countersigned and entered to the following amounts: from First Anditor, $2,707,339,259,659; Fifth Auditor, $756,673,689,822; Commissioner General Land Office, $5,942,790,67; total, $3,471,955,777.18. The report contains a number of recommendations, among which are the following: That the Solicitor of the Treasury represent the Government in important claim cases before the First Comptroller; that authority be given an officer of the Treasury to investigate official transactions and accounts of officers of the Qupartment when necessary in the opinion of the Secretary; that Congress appropriate in gross sums for specific objects, to be expended by various officers. In reference to accounts of the District of Columbia, the report says:

"In settling the accounts of the Commissioners it has been found that some vouchers were for payments not actually and strictly authorized by law, and yet, which would, upon examination by Congress, nevertheless probably be approved, because of the manifest propriety and justice of the payments. In some cases expenditures have been made in improving the streets and avenues not mentioned in the estimates, and so, by reason of the phraseology of the statute, not authorized. The public having received the benefit of the improvements made, doubtless because the Commissioners deemed them necessary, it may be proper that the attention of Congress be called to the subject, to determine whether vouchers in payment should be allowed." The Comptroller also says that it is indispenses be turnished to the office, as the business of the office is greatly in arrears. He suggests a division of claims in the office, with a chief and additional clerks. He makes so ne suggestions in treating officers for public property, and recommends the requirement of reports from REPORT OF COMPTROLLER LAWRENCE

Acting Secretary of the Navy Nichols did a sensible thing the other day in recommending that a liberal appropriation be made to put the buildings in this yard in repair. The old hulks which serve for workshops are in a most dilapidated condition, and unless something is done with them very soon, will crumble to pieces. He also recommended that an appropriation be made to clear the channel so that vessels of a heavy draught can get up to the Yard. At present, ships drawing only seventeen feet of water can reach the docks. If Admiral Nichols' plans are carried out, vessels drawing twenty-five or twenty-seven feet foot of water can safely land. It is to be hoped that Congress will take hold of this matter soon after meeting.

Not Crazy to Hear Patti at 810 a

New York Times, November s.

It will be seen in another column that there has been a modification in the proposed arrangement of the Patti Concert Company. The day has long since passed when foreign artists could come to this country and demand tribute. New York is one of the principal musical capitals of the world, and is not inferior in critical taste to London, Paris, or Berlin, and the attempt by some persons entirely ignorant of the methods of management in the United States to give third-rate concerts at prices which would be deemed excessive for the best representation of opera was doomed to be a failure from the start. While according every credit to Mme. Patti as a great artist, it cannot be reasonably expected that any sane person should care to hear Signor Nicolini and the rest of the company of ordinary performers who are entirely unknown at the extravagant prices demanded. The whole scheme is an insult to the musical culture of New York. Mme. Patti is manifestly the victim of bad management. If she will sing in opera with proper assistance she will be successful. In excessively ordinary concerts, without orchestra, and the cheapest quality of assistance, she does not deserve the support of the musical public.

It is one of those reports which no man not versed in the ways of the Heathen Chines can tell head or tail of. For instance, the can tell head or tail of. For instance, the clerk starts out by saying: "XLVIIth Congress, 1st Session." March 1, 1881. Referred to Committee on Accounts, and ordered printed." "Clerk's Office, House of Representatives United States, Washington, D. C. December, 6, 1881," is the date of the letter transmitting his letter, and he says that it is a report of the doings of his office from the 1st day of July, 1879, to the 30th of June, 1880, inclusive. Just how the 1st Session of the XLVIIth Congress gets in is a question to be answered. And why the report was not submitted December 1, 1880, instead of March 1, 1881, is another.

In view of the fact that the board failed to agree on several important matters for which they were mainly called together, naval officers are now criticising the action of the Secretary in ever appointing the beard at all.
